February Speaker: Madeleine Franco

Flock Management Techniques for the “ Excessively Enthusiastic” Aviculture Hobbyist

A bird in the hand so often results in more of them. If you find yourself the proud owner of a flock of parrots, here's help toward making your avicultural pursuits less “birdensome.” Debunking some time-honored myths about our feathered friends and recognizing parrots as a lot more flexible and capable of adjusting to your lifestyle than you may have imagined, this is a presentation to help you work smarter not harder to provide optimal care and enjoyment for your flock. From housing, feeding and cleaning to playtime and socialization, learn tips and shortcuts that will help you avoid the “guilts” and rediscover the fun, while staying organized and sane in a multiple-bird household. Oh, but wait! There are even helpful hints for those who have only one or two birds.

Madeleine, founding president of the Southern Nevada Parrot Education, Rescue & Rehoming Society and a work-from-home “bird-mom” to a mixed, non-breeding but highly interactive and platonic pet flock, is a professional business writer with a degree in communications. Her 450-square foot aviary has served as the proving grounds for many of the tips and tricks that have helped keep the work of keeping birds enjoyable. Madeleine is no stranger to doing things on a large scale, and she knows from experience that if you're going to go large, you've got to go efficient. From 1985 to 1989, as the mother of two young boys, she held a U.S. Fish and Wildlife permit for the rehabilitation of migratory waterfowl. Following a trip to Australia, she became hooked on hookbills, totally!

It's 2018—Time for a new WAES logo!

Amy Olson has been working to increase our presence on social media and modernize the look of our website. The goal is to make WAES more visible and attractive to potential new members. You can participate by commenting, posting topics of interest or sharing photos/videos of your own beloved feathered friends. Also, part of Amy's efforts has been the generation of a new logo. Thanks Amy—for all your work you deserve a big
